

Gold regains some of its luster; oil keeps rising

Associated Press, 4-6-12

Gold rose $16 to $1,630.10 per ounce after two days of losses. But it's still down about $40 for the week. The price of natural gas fell after a government report detailed a surprisingly large increase in supply, raising concerns that the industry is producing more than Americans will use.

Oil prices climbed after a two-day reprieve, with benchmark crude hitting $103.30 per barrel. Retail gasoline prices rose by nearly a penny to $3.936 per gallon.
